

Stone curlew facts

- These fussy birds will only lay eggs on ground that's vegetation is 2cm or less.
- They have big eyes to forage for invertebrates and small vertebrates between dawn and dusk.
- They live in open habitat with spread out vegetation.
- There are only 350 breeding pairs of stone curlews in the UK. 250 of these pairs love in the Brecks.
- Stone curlews are predominantly nocturnal.
- Stone curlews can lay up to 5 clutches of eggs in one year.

Stone curlew facts

- These fussy birds will only lay eggs on ground that's vegetation is 2cm or less.
- They have big eyes to forage for invertebrates and small vertebrates between dawn and dusk.
- They live in open habitat with spread out vegetation.
- There are only 350 breeding pairs of stone curlews in the UK. 250 of these pairs love in the Brecks.
- Stone curlews are predominantly nocturnal.
- Stone curlews can lay up to 5 clutches of eggs in one year.

Stone curlew facts

- These fussy birds will only lay eggs on ground that's vegetation is 2cm or less.
- They have big eyes to forage for invertebrates and small vertebrates between dawn and dusk.
- They live in open habitat with spread out vegetation.
- There are only 350 breeding pairs of stone curlews in the UK. 250 of these pairs love in the Brecks.
- Stone curlews are predominantly nocturnal.
- Stone curlews can lay up to 5 clutches of eggs in one year.

