NWT Ranworth Broad is nationally important for wildlife. It is situated in the middle stretches of the River Bure Marshes National Nature Reserve. A boardwalk trail leads through woodland and reedbed to the floating visitor centre, which provides excellent views over the open water.

Access for All NWT Ranworth Broad

From the reserve car park to the floating visitor centre measures 820 metres. The route is flat and does not include any gates or stiles. The majority of the route is on boardwalk but does include two sections of road, where there is no pavement.

This map gives information on paths, positioning of seats, viewing platforms and passing places to help you decide if this reserve is suitable for your needs.
